VOL. XXI.—NO. 6265. PORTLAND, OREGON: MONDAY, MAY 16, 1881. PRICE—FIVE CENTS

THE POSTAL PLUNDERERS.

Records of the Star Route Frauds Destroyed by Brady.

HOW SPECIAL AGENT REESIDE LOST HIS PLACE.

His Expose Three Years Ago Unheeded by Gen. Key—Dorsey's Activity in Working Matters in the South and West, Said Rates, Etc., Etc., Etc.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

New York, May 15.—The [illegible] this morning has a long story from Washington about the star routes. It says that Postmaster General James has before him no easy task, but he has undertaken the work of [illegible] star routes rings and exposing their [illegible] with a determination to pursue it to the end. By the side of his Attorney General MacVeagh [illegible] deeply aroused by the enormity of the transactions under investigation and [illegible] determined to punish the guilty parties, wherever they may be found. These gentlemen are supported by [illegible] the president, who is deeply interested [illegible] to the bottom with a firm hand. Evidence which is accumulating in the hands of Mr. James' subordinates was submitted to the attorney general, who already possesses some very interesting matter for use in the courts. This evidence is preserved for use hereafter. The postmaster general has discovered since taking charge of the department that many valuable papers which ought to be on file in the office of the second assistant postmaster general are missing. Among those which cannot be found are reports made by special agents in relation to some of the routes held by the rings and manipulated for their benefit. Many of these reports were severely criticised. These reports show in many cases how routes were increased and service expedited. Brady completely controlled his inspectors. No one can tell how many [illegible] regarded as unnecessary [illegible]. It is believed that the rings are relying [illegible] expected indignation of the people who have been served [illegible] by their routes, [illegible] hope that this indignation will be manifested wherever service may be reduced or cut off, and manifested so strongly that it will produce sentiment in their favor. [illegible] that some of the contractors [illegible] at work endeavoring to prejudice the people in their vicinity against the postmaster-general and his undertaking. The rings may discover that the inhabitants of the frontier, while they desire mail facilities, are not willing to be swindled [illegible] the people's money [illegible]. The rings are [illegible] hopefully expecting that exposure of their transactions will be an old and almost forgotten story when the next session of congress begins. In this they are mistaken. The frauds which were committed in the postal service under Thomas Brady were not confined to overland stage routes on the frontier and in sparsely settled territories. According to the last annual report of the second assistant postmaster general, there were, Nov. 30, 1880, in the United States 9,225 star routes on which service was performed by men and horses [illegible]. The annual cost of these routes was $7,[illegible]. There were also [illegible] steamboat routes, the cost of which was $887,[illegible]. Many of these steamboat routes were absolutely worthless, and a large part of the money paid for them was thrown away for the benefit of contractors and those with whom contractors are supposed to have divided. Since the beginning of the new administration, [illegible] has been sent south for the purpose of inspecting the steamboat service and making reports in relation to it. In accordance with reports [illegible] service has been cut off on several routes, but there [illegible] in the department reports concerning this service. These reports were made by J. E. Reeside, special agent, and certified copies of them were furnished to a congressional committee. Reeside was an expert employed during the investigation made in the spring of 1878 by the house committee on post-offices and post roads. He had been a contractor and thoroughly understood the ways of contractors. His report created great anxiety among steamboat contractors and they came to Washington. His first reports were made Oct. 18, 1877. Seven days later Senator Dorsey wrote to the postmaster general denouncing Reeside and [illegible]. It is believed he wrote that it was the duty of the department to [illegible]. On Nov. 28, 1877, Dorsey wrote a long personal letter to Judge Key [illegible] Reeside [illegible]. [illegible] W. P. Edgerton, who is thoroughly familiar with the country [illegible] chief special agent for the southwest [illegible] integrity and character [illegible]. Many letters were written [illegible]. Senator Dorsey sent in many petitions and wrote private letters for each route. He mostly urged continuance of route [illegible] which has been cut off for cause. Wilshire, of Arkansas, [illegible]. Reeside was appointed by Judge Key September 1, 1877, and was reappointed [illegible]. His commission was allowed to expire December 1, 1877, although [illegible] commission of all other special agents were renewed.

The Great Expose.

New York, May 15.—The Herald's special correspondent at Washington, speaking of the effort to discover the author of the "Great Expose," says: [illegible] the alleged authorship I have nothing to say. [illegible] of the same first-class ability. But after all what matters it who wrote or who doesn't write the opening chapters of the inside history of the Garfield administration? The country does not care a picayune. All it cares about is this: Is the story true? When its truth, as represented by me, is denied, proof shall be forthcoming. I have made the charge, I await the answer.

Gorham Denies.

The National Republican today, referring to a [illegible] report that Gorham wrote the [illegible] attack upon President Garfield, recently printed in the New York Herald, and that Senator Conkling furnished the material, makes the following [illegible]: "Geo. C. Gorham did not write, suggest or have any knowledge prior to its publication of any of the matter which has appeared in the Herald concerning the President. Senator Conkling declares that he neither furnished nor inspired the matter alluded to, and [illegible] the subject."

GENERAL NEWS.

President Villard makes a Statement.

New York, May 15.—[illegible] a report that an agreement has been [illegible] Villard, president of the Oregon Railway & Navigation company, [illegible] the Northern Pacific railway [illegible] President Billings, [illegible] against the company [illegible] the recent issue of stock [illegible] the O. R. & N. [illegible] there was any truth in the story printed this morning, Villard replied: "While it is true that [illegible] with a view to a mutually satisfactory arrangement, no agreement has yet been reached. The published version [illegible] of the proposed agreement is incorrect in the most essential particulars. [illegible] except myself, has been cognizant of the details of negotiations. I deem it due to President Billings to state that there has been no desire on any part to bring about his retirement [illegible] of a majority of the present board of directors. On the contrary I have myself offered to [illegible] support all of the stock I represent, as I deem it of vital importance that one so long identified with the enterprise should continue in his position. I would add that in the present as in former negotiations Billings has acted with the utmost loyalty, both to the interests of the Northern Pacific railroad company and to those who have been associated with him so long in its management. He has always subordinated his personal interests to the protection of what he considered to be the interests of the company, and he has steadily insisted that in any agreement between the two parties the first consideration should be a policy that would assure the [illegible] prosperity of the company, before even considering personal questions."

Dishonest Service.

New York, May 15.—The recent musical festival was swindled heavily by messenger boys, speculators and others to the extent of several thousand dollars.

Fraudulent Tickets.

Five immigrants from Italy arrived here with tickets which they paid for at Turin to take them from that place to Bradford, Pa., but which proved to be fraudulent upon presentation to the Erie railroad. The emigration commission is investigating the matter.

Childish.

There is a probability of trouble at a Sunday school parade in Brooklyn this year, as the Unitarians, Swedenborgians, Universalists and some other denominations have not been invited to participate. [illegible] Sunday school and the mission schools connected with it, have invited their schools to march with them, and if the Sunday school union does not permit them to march in regular order with the others, they will make a parade on the same day on a route of their own.

Death of L. A. Gobright.

Chicago, May 15.—Reports received indicate that the growth has made great strides during the last two weeks of [illegible]. Winter wheat has suffered [illegible]. The prospect is good for [illegible] of a full crop.

College Boat Race.

Boston, May 15.—The Harvard [illegible] won the [illegible] race [illegible]. The [illegible] was half a length behind and the [illegible] third.

Body Found.

New York, May 15.—The body of John R. Sterrett, a correspondent of the American News Company, of this city, was found on Friday and [illegible] was reported to the [illegible] at Flatbush. The body was so decomposed [illegible].

The Indians defending their Rights.

[illegible], May 15.—[illegible] together an army of three hundred men and has issued an order that Texas cattle raisers and white men generally must leave the country before June [illegible]. A similar situation prevails in the [illegible] nation. [illegible] Trouble in the Chickasaw nation [illegible] is said to [illegible] per head for stock cattle [illegible]. The white population are there without proper [illegible] the right.

JUSTICE STANLEY MATTHEWS.

The Anti-Monopoly Men.

New York, May 15.—A largely attended meeting of the anti-monopoly league [illegible] protest against the confirmation of Stanley Matthews as justice of the supreme court. [illegible] Resolutions were adopted [illegible] Stanley Matthews [illegible] pack the supreme court with judges [illegible] decisions in the [illegible]. The meeting also viewed the nomination of [illegible], son-in-law of Vanderbilt, and [illegible] as alarming proofs of the purpose and power of corporate monopolies. Addresses were made by Mayor Hogarty, ex-Senator Creamer and M. [illegible] Sanden.

The Bulletin's View.

New York, May 15.—Commercial Bulletin: The real significance of the senate's confirmation of Stanley Matthews as supreme court judge is not in connection with its party relationship, but in the fact that a power has arisen in this country which is strong enough now to overrule both great political parties, and right in the teeth of an opposing public opinion and [illegible] every dictate of propriety to compel those two parties [illegible] to do their bidding. This is at once apparent from an analysis of the vote thus among senators [illegible] it is believed are such leading democrats as Voorhees of Indiana, Pendleton of Ohio, Beck of Kentucky, and Lamar of Mississippi. We do not see how these hereafter [illegible] opponents of corporate monopoly can [illegible] their constituents [illegible] the face when they return, [illegible] such a record. It looks as if these senators have been deliberately sold out.

The Sun Scores the Democrats.

The [illegible] says: "To the credit of the republicans [illegible] senate [illegible] Matthews [illegible] democratic party [illegible]

Another Democratic Opinion.

[illegible], May 15.—The [illegible] New York [illegible] says: The votes of such democratic statesmen as [illegible] Voorhees, Beck and Pendleton secure for Stanley Matthews is estimated to throw the party into confusion. It is by no means improbable that one and the senators referred to will be found ably called to explain the difference between their professions and practice. The [illegible] transportation which had [illegible] of Matthews from the start of the [illegible] wholly in the railroad interest are going to have a meeting to express their views of the situation and the anti-monopoly party can [illegible] be sure will not be slow in following up the movement from the [illegible] standpoint.

Cowardice in the Senate.

It is discovered that Matthews could have had three or four votes if they were absolutely necessary for his confirmation. A few senators preferred to go on the record against him, but would have voted for him rather than see him defeated.

FRANCE IN AFRICA.

Paris, May 15.—Italy, upon being informed of the conclusion of the Tunis treaty, directed her representatives abroad to consult the governments as to the propriety of convening a conference to which France should be invited to submit the treaty. Bismarck, upon receiving the suggestion, ordered the German ambassador at Rome to declare emphatically that Germany refused to participate in any such attempt and rejected all idea of a European conference on Tunisian affairs.

France and England and the Tunisian Affair.

A change according over the attitude of England toward France, caused chiefly by [illegible] the [illegible] as well as the [illegible] scheme of their own, [illegible] than in Algeria [illegible] which has now [illegible] Germany [illegible] more soldiers in Tunis, although France [illegible] another branch of the [illegible] the Italian [illegible] England. The [illegible] to bring the Tunisian treaty before [illegible] Bismarck [illegible] before that respect. England's action is paralyzed [illegible] Salisbury's secret assurance to Waddington [illegible] of the time of the Cyprus convention. [illegible] the Tunis matter may lead [illegible] bad feeling between France and England regarding Egypt. Some newspapers urge the maintenance of [illegible] and the [illegible] influence at Cairo. Gladstone will not [illegible] this proposal. [illegible] that it would be better to have no higher duties. Should the increased tariff be [illegible] the government will find some difficulty in resisting the pressure of the agitation for retaliatory measures. The circumstances respecting the recent movement [illegible] to sugar bounties show how great may be the pressure in regard to other parts of the tariff, should agitation once be proved at the moment when the great question appears to be almost settled.

The News states that the British government has [illegible] to express an opinion on annexation of Tunis in a dispatch which will maintain the [illegible] taken by England that Tunis is part of the Ottoman empire, but for the present nothing further is intended than to place this protection on record.

Constantinople, May 15.—Assim Pasha, minister of foreign affairs, has told Tessot, French ambassador, that the porte has not renounced the right to dispatch a man-of-war to Tunis. Tessot replied that Turkey in taking such a step would incur the responsibility of grave results.

Italy and the Tunisian Affair.

Rome, May 15.—King Humbert has accepted the resignation of the ministry, and has asked Signor Sella, leader of the right, to reform the cabinet. Signor Sella has consented to undertake the task. The tone of today's newspapers [illegible] the pressure in [illegible] the Franco-Tunis treaty has caused. The Bersagliere says that the Cairoli ministry erred solely through loyalty and integrity. They could not have anticipated the [illegible] of such a treaty after the declarations of France. The Popolo Romano [illegible] but she hopes the day may not be far distant when France may have to change her attitude. [illegible] Crispi's [illegible] to sustain [illegible].

IOWA REPUBLICANS.

Garfield Endorsed. The Senatorial Courtesy Doctrine Condemned.

Davenport, Iowa, May 15.—A largely attended [illegible] speeches were made, holding that German [illegible] the P. S. senate to [illegible] the right of [illegible] by Senator Conkling that it was a distasteful appointment [illegible] the popular will is with him, and therefore the republican citizens of Davenport declare the conviction that the senate should at once vote upon the nomination of Judge Robertson as collector, as the constitution provides.

Resolutions heartily approved the nomination of Robertson for his acknowledged probity, fitness and ability, and see no reason why he should not be instantly confirmed and they particularly hope the senators from Iowa will vote for confirmation.

While deploring any breach of friendly feeling between the president and senators, they believe the senators and not the president must be blamed therefor. They regret that "the senatorial courtesy" [illegible]

SIGNS of CATARRH!

No other such loathsome, treacherous and undermining malady curses mankind. One-fifth of our Children die of diseases generated by its Infectious Poison, and one fourth of living men and women drag out miserable existences from the same cause. While asleep, the impurities in the nostrils are necessarily swallowed into the stomach and inhaled into the lungs to poison every part of the system. Dr. Wei De Meyer's Catarrh Cure absorbs the purulent virus and kills the seeds of poison in the farthest parts of the system. It will not only relieve, but certainly cure Catarrh at any stage. It is the only remedy which in our judgment, has ever yet really cured a case of Chronic Catarrh.

IMPUDENT RASCALITY.

When [illegible] James began his attack on the [illegible] and swindlers of the Brady-Dorsey [illegible] partners [illegible] evidently [illegible] they were at once driven from all [illegible] of corrupt practices they would [illegible] the most damaging [illegible] to prove that President Garfield was himself cognizant of the entire star route business; that during the political contest [illegible] his election it was the subscriptions of the star route contractors that carried the state of Indiana for the republican presidential candidate, and that Garfield himself [illegible] with full knowledge of the sources from which the money was derived; and they went so far as to intimate that they had letters written by him which would, if published, and they would publish if pressed, bring overwhelming dishonor upon him. How this was to establish their own innocence they did not take the trouble to explain. But the president didn't interpose. On the contrary, he directed the postmaster general to go on with the investigation, and to make it as thorough as possible. Threats having proved unavailing, as every one knew they would, the rascals of the ring are obliged to content themselves with denouncing in a vile and general way a president who will not protect his "friends." This expedient is quite as impudent as the other. The scoundrels hope to obtain credit by proclaiming themselves the intimate "friends" of the president of the United States. And [illegible] as the device [illegible] does not screen them, but on the contrary serves to show their utter desperation.

The guilty are not to be permitted to escape because they are republicans. Had the democrats elected Hancock they would have welcomed these frauds for party capital, had they dared to expose them; but the chances are very great that the ring which could so long control democratic congresses would have been able to get a postmaster general who would have protected them and their practices. Had President Garfield attempted to cover up the frauds "for the sake of the party," as the rascals claimed he ought to have done, the consequence to the party would have been disastrous enough. The talk that the money stolen was used "to save the party" is probably as absurd and impudent as the other assertions noted. For it is well said that this is not the way of corruptionists. They are often ruined by blackmailers, but are never hurt by party assessments. In the latter they are usually stingy, and when pulled away from the public crib they often go over to the opposition.

THE FRENCH IN TUNIS.

The telegraphic reports are loaded with accounts of the French occupation of Tunis. This small state has long been a dependency of Turkey, though only nominally so. Great Britain however declares that she considers it an actual part of the porte's dominions, and enters a protest against the French occupation. In Italy also the question has produced no small commotion, resulting in the resignation of the whole Italian ministry. Yet the French do not relinquish their hold upon the state which they have invaded. On the contrary they have entered into a treaty with Tunis by which they have assumed a protectorate over the country. This virtually makes it a French colony. Tunis is one of the Barbary states, adjoining the French colony of Algeria, and contains about 70,000 square miles, with a population of between two and three millions. In common with the whole country on the southern shore of the Mediterranean, it was overrun by the great Saracenic invasion about the end of the seventh century. Charles V. made it tributary to Spain in 1535, but in 1574 it was conquered by the Turks. But the hold of the Turks has been gradually shaken, till, for many years past, Tunis has been practically an independent state. French influence has long been powerful and even predominant there; and the present occupation of the country by French troops is only a natural, and in fact inevitable consequence of a long train of causes. France declares that she is moved to this proceeding by the necessity of defending her people in Tunis, who have been subject to raids by the Kroumirs, a nomadic people of the desert who live by plunder, and who must be suppressed. The scene of this act in history is old historic ground. Here Carthage stood, and here that city and Rome contended for the mastery of the world in a series of wars which made more history than any other wars of ancient times. In the state of Tunis there is a large area of exceedingly fertile country, convenient to seaports, which once had a most prominent position in the commerce of the world. But inundated by one wave of invasion after another, and for many centuries past controlled by a half-barbarous mongrel population who have to a large extent followed the trade of robbing both by sea and land, the country has made no progress in civilization. French influence cannot but be a great instrument for its regeneration.

THE BRITISH DRINK BILL.

British statisticians find, very unexpectedly, that the consumption of spirits, wine and beer in the United Kingdom actually exhibits a marked decrease as compared with returns of a few years ago. In the year 1878 the consumption reached the enormous total of 1,190,886,491 gallons, having a retail value of $71[illegible],506. It appears that since then there has been a steady and continuous decrease in the British drink bill. The reckoning is still high, but it falls much below the enormous total of 1878. The quantity and value of liquors of all kinds consumed in Great Britain and Ireland during the year 1880 were as follows:

	Gallons.	Value.
British spirits	28,457,486	$142,287,433
Foreign spirits	8,477,512	60,862,970
Wine	15,852,335	71,337,510
Beer	905,088,078	339,408,[illegible]
Cider, etc.	15,000,000	7,500,000
Total	972,876,311	621,304,[illegible]

It should be understood that these figures show the value at retail. The amount, though one hundred millions in value below that of 1878, is too large to be grasped by any mind. Its magnitude may, however, be realized in some degree by comparing it with the national expenses of the empire. In the fiscal year which ended on the 31st March, the British exchequer paid out $415,540,390. That sum covered all the disbursements on account of the army, the navy, the civil list and the public debt. In a word, it met the total cost of maintaining the empire. Yet it fell short of the amount of the drink bill by no less than $195,876,375. According to the official estimate, the population of Great Britain and Ireland numbered 34,505,043 in 1880. Reckoning upon that basis, the per capita consumption of liquor shows the very high average of 28.10 gallons, having a value of $17.71, or $1.0[illegible] per man. Yet the per capita reduction since 1878 amounts to 7.01 gallons in quantity, and $3.32 in value, a decrease of 20 per cent. In comparison with the quantities of 1878, the consumption of last year exhibited a decrease of 2,86[illegible] gallons spirits, [illegible] gallons wine, [illegible] [illegible]

Senator Slater [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in Oregon [illegible] March [illegible]. Certain [illegible] F. R. Wilcox for the part he acted in [illegible] up the star routes. But [illegible] with [illegible]. All the work done by men like Wilcox would have been of no avail had it not been supplemented at Washington by other agents or "workers" who pushed matters in the department and got the [illegible]

There have been [illegible] despatches [illegible] relating to the negotiations for the settlement of the [illegible] between the [illegible] about the Northern Pacific railroad. [illegible] that [illegible] for a [illegible] to be made for a [illegible] just what will be [illegible] it can not yet be known. [illegible] Mr. Villard, which [illegible] that [illegible] the [illegible] Oregon [illegible]. Necessarily, however, [illegible] matter of this kind [illegible] with the men who are in [illegible] those who are not [illegible] the great [illegible] of the members of the syndicate through which the money is being furnished for construction [illegible] being exerted to bring about [illegible] arrangement of conflicting [illegible] and interests. We have [illegible] a private letter from a business man of Portland, who is now or was recently in New York, that it is understood in financial circles there that the great and in fact the only important obstacle to adjustment is the disposition to be made of the eighteen millions of newly issued stock. Except for this, he writes, it is now believed there would have been no serious trouble about reaching a settlement. But nothing can be more certain than that great interests like these must sooner or later come to an accommodation in one way or another. No conflict so injurious to both parties can long be maintained.

It is pretty certain that Dakota is the next territory that will gain admission as a state. Washington would be next in order. In fact she would have been a state long ago had she been favored with railroad connections to contribute to her population and general development. But Dakota, more fortunate in this respect, will now in all probability get in ahead of her. It was recently announced that contracts had been made to carry 60,000 emigrants from Norway and Sweden to America this year, and the Chicago Tribune learns that this will be accomplished as fast as steam can do it. The same paper says it is probable that 40,000 of these people will be settled in Minnesota and Dakota. Large numbers are also pouring into Dakota from Illinois, Wisconsin and other states. Considerable portions of Dakota lie in the region of deficient rainfall, and other portions of it are known as the "bad lands," but after subtracting all these there still remain from 80,000 to 100,000 square miles, or an area equal to that of Illinois and Indiana, which is susceptible of easy and profitable cultivation. It is believed that not less than 100,000 will be added to the population of Dakota within the present year.

The people of Virginia, and especially of Richmond and other large cities and towns of the proud old commonwealth, are fully alive to the importance of making extensive preparations for the multitude which will visit Yorktown during the celebration, which takes place on the 1st of October. That place is a landmark in our revolutionary trouble and sacred ground. The business men of Richmond have organized a joint stock company for the purpose of raising a fund to secure substantial landings for steamers, seating accommodations for 50,000 persons, departments for public comfort, a narrow gauge road to carry visitors to and from the landing, furnish camp and parade grounds, etc. It is probable that a regiment of French soldiers will be present and many eminent men from France. The certificate of the stock company will contain accurate pictures of Carpenter's Hall, Independence Hall, the Manse House, yet standing on the battlefield of Yorktown; the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the surrender of Cornwallis, and the portraits of Generals Washington, Lafayette and the Counts De Rochambeau and De Grasse. It is proposed to invite the governors, senators and members of the house of every state in the union to be present.

Mr. Emerson is quoted by a writer in the Cincinnati Commercial as having said on a certain occasion some years ago: "I loved Carlyle; we have been the best of friends. He sent me the proofs of all his works and I returned him mine. We have respected and trusted each other, but I can never forgive him for the course he pursued toward the north during the rebellion. We have ceased all intercourse, and I know nothing of him."

Inasmuch as S. W. Dorsey wrote a letter to the postmaster general denying all connection with star route frauds and challenging investigation, the postmaster general proposes to accommodate him, and is collecting for that purpose the very abundant evidence within easy reach. One consequence will doubtless be the annulment of the contracts on most if not all the Dorsey routes.

General Sherman, by his remarks on the battle of Shiloh, has brought on his head a great deal of criticism. It has led also to reexamination of his assault at Kenesaw, with severe animadversions on the useless waste of life there entailed. An article on this last subject, printed in another place today, will be found of great interest.

"Free Ships and Subsidies" is the title of a ringing article in the United Service for May by Lieutenant J. D. J. Kelly, United States navy. It raises a strong voice for giving our capitalists a chance to be shipowners by permitting them to buy vessels wherever they are cheapest.

This map has been lithographed by Mr. A. G. Walling, who has certainly excelled [illegible] work in a fine style of the art.

[illegible].—The board of trustees of the Willamette University elected without a dissenting vote, at a meeting recently held, Rev. J. W. [illegible], D. D., to the chair of professor of natural sciences and dean of the college of liberal arts. Professor [illegible] is now president of the Upper Iowa University, and ranks among the first educators of the nation. The board also elected by the same vote [illegible], M. D., F. R. S., lecturer on hygiene and physiological topics.

STREET CONTRACTS LET.—Saturday the committee on streets and public property of the common council awarded the contract for improving Morrison street from First to Second, with stone block pavement, to S. S. Cook & Co. for $1 per square yard. Contracts for improving Fifth street, from Columbia to Jackson, were awarded. Three blocks to [illegible] Baker, and one block each to Manning Bros., Jas. Franey and James Johnson.

COMMITTED.—Mr. Lewellyn, the first officer of the ship Agnes Oswald, which lies moored at the foot of Washington street, became insane a few days ago and Friday grew so violent that he was conveyed to the county jail for safe keeping. Saturday he was examined before Judge Rice and adjudged insane. Lewellyn was committed to the asylum Saturday evening.

NOT VERY ENCOURAGING.—The Astorian of Saturday says: "The salmon fishing season is nearly half gone today, and yet there are but very few fish in sight. None of the canneries, not one, has worked to its full capacity, nor half its capacity, a day yet."

RAILROAD EXTENSION.—Through private sources information is received here that 10,000 tons of steel rails for extension of the Oregon and California railroad south of Roseburg will be afloat from British ports by the 1st December next.

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT.—Judge Deady will deliver an opinion in this court this morning in the case of the Orange National Bank vs. George W. Traver and Emma S. Traver upon the demurrer to the wife's plea to the bill.

O. U. STATE CONVENTION.—The Oregon Universalist state convention will be held at [illegible] grove five miles south of Halsey, commencing on June 3d, 1881. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

[illegible].—The latest reports from the several [illegible] up the Columbia state that the river is [illegible]. The Willamette is slowly falling here.

BRIEF NOTES.

Nearly time for Oregon strawberries.

First cavalry band concert to-morrow evening.

The Columbia sails from San Francisco this evening.

Last appearance of the minstrels next Friday evening.

Save a goodly portion of your flowers for Decoration day.

All the Fourth of July celebration committees are hard at work.

Grand organ concert at Taylor street Methodist church next Friday evening.

The wind and dust here yesterday [illegible] of San Francisco's [illegible] weather.

The Handel and Haydn society will present Haydn's Third Mass at its next concert.

W. W. Baker informs us that he has sold the [illegible] of Oregon and Washington, the reason for so doing being that the Rural Spirit, a weekly paper devoted to the "farm, stock, turf, field and practical science," has and is meeting with such encouragement that it alone requires his entire attention. We also learn that the Rural Spirit will enter upon its third year (vol. 3, No. 1), next Friday. It is to be a 16-page, as well as the handsomest class paper published in the northwest. The success of the Rural Spirit goes to prove that the people here will support an enterprise worthy of their patronage and esteem.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE MINSTRELS.—Good houses were present at New Market Theatre at the Saturday matinee and in the evening. On both occasions excellent programmes were rendered.

This morning the company will start up the valley. They will appear at Reed's Opera House this and to-morrow evenings. On Wednesday they will play at Albany, and Thursday at Corvallis.

Returning to this city, the company will appear here on Friday night, May 20th. This will positively be the last performance given by the company in Portland. On that occasion a tremendous bill will be offered. Every selection will be new. One of the most attractive features of the evening will be a sketch by Theo. Jackson, the interlocutor, and Major Nutt, entitled "The Long and the Short of it," or, "The Two Pilgrims." Among other things will be the great sketch, "Fun on an Emigrant Car." It is the intention of the management to give the best bill yet offered the public by the company. In another column will be found full particulars.

THE CAVALRY BAND.—Those who enjoy band music of high order will be well repaid by attending the concerts to be given Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings by the First Cavalry Band of Walla Walla. A more delightful programme than that announced for to-morrow evening has seldom, if ever, been presented here.

This evening at 7 o'clock the Grand Encampment of Oregon will meet at Odd Fellows' Temple for the transaction of business, annual election of officers, etc.

To-morrow morning at 10 o'clock the Grand Lodge of this state will meet at Odd Fellows' Temple. The Lodge will probably be in session several days.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Real Estate.—See Mr. [illegible] advertisement under "new to-day," of desirable real estate offered by him.

The ratification of the Chinese treaty will be celebrated by Uncle Myers, in a manner worthy of the occasion. Consequently his rate of interest will be lowered.

NEW DEPARTMENT.—Neuneyer, the well known tailor, in addition to making up gentlemen's dress and business suits as formerly, will take orders for suits [illegible], ladies' riding habits, and suits for livery. Having had calls for such work, and recently secured the services of a cutter who understands the work, he is now prepared to receive orders.

Impure blood is shown by skin disorders, pimples, swellings, ulcers, etc., also by liver and kidney complaints, constipation, piles, indigestion, [illegible] weakness, lassitude, general weakness, and many other symptoms. Purify with [illegible]. See advertisement.

[illegible] Harrison will not be found at the corner First and Washington streets, but you will be sure to find him in his new place next week. This will not prevent him selling goods way down at the old stand, corner of Morrison and Front street.

Why ride in a shabby old carriage when you can ride in a nice new one for the same price at Acker & Leiby's City stables.

Genuine homemade taffys and chewing creams made fresh every day at Durkee's Post Office Candy store, opposite post office, Fifth and Morrison.

LADIES.—The best shoes for ladies, misses and children are made by Holbrook & Co., Utica, N. Y. Ask your dealer for them and take no other.

The only coupes in town are at Acker & Leiby's City Stables.

Spring Lamb, very choice, at Hoffman's.

THE O. T. CONCERT.

Last winter three or four ladies, representing a committee of seven or eight persons, inaugurated a series of twenty-five cent concerts, to be given under the auspices of the Opera [illegible], and with the proceeds to purchase [illegible] for the society. They have [illegible] entertainments, and when the amount of work necessary to prepare them is considered, and notice is taken of the variety and character of the talent which has appeared, it will be conceded that the ladies have been remarkably [illegible]. [illegible] remark by those who have attended, that the concerts are equal to those of [illegible]. The ladies have [illegible] and the public have [illegible].

Saturday night the concert [illegible] the Opera [illegible] was [illegible] Mr. [illegible] and Mr. [illegible] were [illegible] parts. Mr. Albert [illegible] the ladies have a pecuniary [illegible] in [illegible] talent. [illegible] representing [illegible], the drop on drovers, [illegible] hotel keepers [illegible]. Mr. Charles Hallon [illegible] account of a [illegible].

Mr. [illegible] a great treat and [illegible] Dutch verse [illegible] when [illegible] the day when [illegible] of the well known lines were [illegible], and the audience mightily pleased. Ditto with the [illegible] song later.

Mr. Anderson gave "Happy be thy Dreams," [illegible] sang "Upon the Danube River," [illegible] heartily encored, [illegible].

Miss Millard, Mrs. Loperly and Mrs. Bird shared the honors of accompanying, each in [illegible] style. Miss Millard has the thanks of the committee [illegible] cheerfully given.

The Amphions, namely, Francis, Moore, [illegible], Shattuck, gave two pieces, and were vigorously encored both times. They have evidently practiced much together, and there is very enjoyable kind of music, the human voice unaccompanied.

Miss Annie Bryge, a young teacher from San Francisco, appeared in songs and recitations and was enthusiastically received and recalled. One thing she does which many public performers would do well to imitate, and that is, she selects such pieces as are adapted to her voice and abilities, and then performs them in a correct manner. Her forte seems to be in the rendition of songs of the heart—pathetic ballads, appealing to sentiments which exist in every one. She has a manner peculiar to herself, and in her way to render [illegible] remarkably pleasing to her audience.

SUNDAY MORNING'S FIRE

A few minutes after 9 o'clock Sunday morning the [illegible] on the roof of the American Exchange Hotel, a large three story building, corner of Front and Jefferson streets, took fire and quickly spread. An alarm was turned in from Box 6, but through some disarrangement did not strike the large bell. A number of guests who were still asleep in their rooms were hastily aroused and made their escape. No. Four's suction could not reach water in the cistern corner of First and Jefferson, hence there was slight delay in getting water on the flames. The fire boat [illegible], conveniently adjacent, did excellent work and sent a splendid stream. The fire was confined to the third story, although every room in the main building was flooded. H. F. [illegible], owner of the hotel, loses between $[illegible] and $[illegible], which is more than covered by insurance of $[illegible], divided as follows: Western, $[illegible]; Connecticut Fire, $[illegible]; State Investment, $1,000. The building, owned by the Oregon [illegible] Railway Company, is damaged probably a loss and is insured.

Two Alarms Saturday.

Saturday evening the department was called out twice by general alarms. The first was sent in at a [illegible] occasioned by an insignificant blaze on the roof of Jim Turk's boarding house on [illegible] street. The second alarm was sounded at [illegible], and was caused by a burning chimney in the residence of Major A. [illegible] Sears, 258 Main street, near Ninth. Damage at both fires is [illegible].

ROBBED OF $2200.

Felix Landers Hides that Amount in Gold Coin, and Saturday Night Finds it Gone.

On the 21st of last month Mr. Felix Landers, a retired farmer and capitalist, who lives at the corner of Eighth and Harris streets, sold two lots on block 165 to Ezra Tyron, and deposited the money in bank. Last Tuesday he drew $2200 in gold coin, and, putting it into an old can, hid it under the porch adjoining his dwelling, a place used for storing [illegible] lumber, etc. Saturday evening about 8 o'clock he took $[illegible] from the cache, which he intended to pay to his brother, and with Mrs. Landers left the house. Returning an hour and a half later, they found that every room in the house had been ransacked. Searching for his treasure under the porch, Mr. Landers found to his dismay that it had been taken. As he keeps no servants and as no one besides himself, to his knowledge, had cognizance of money being hid, he can give no clue to the robbery.

IRISH LAND LEAGUE.

Yesterday's meeting of this organization proved to be the largest and most interesting ever held.

After the usual opening business communications were read from the Dalles, Walla Walla and Vancouver, announcing the formation of branch leagues, and the letting donations.

Under the head of new business, a number of ladies stepped forward with a beautiful silk flag of green, white and gold, and Miss Maggie [illegible], who was tastefully dressed in white, delivered a neat presentation address, which was replied to by the president in an appropriate manner. The flag [illegible] with the national air, then "Our Flag, the Green, White and Gold," after which Miss Conroy sang the "Wear Little Shamrock" with much feeling.

The committee on picnic reported successful progress, and on motion it was decided that the league should assemble at 7:45 A. M. Sunday next to parade in procession to the boat.

The debate on resolutions after several eloquent speeches and over six weeks' debate, came to a close by a vote favoring an aggressive policy.

P. C. P. A.—THIRD ANNUAL MEETING.

The following circular letter addressed to editors and publishers of the Pacific coast, has been received:

SAN FRANCISCO, April 26, 1881.

The third annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Press Association will be held in the city of San Francisco, commencing at 11 A. M. on Tuesday, June 7th, at Washington hall, No. 35 Eddy street, which has been kindly tendered by the grand and subordinate camps of the P. O. S. of A.

We have reason to believe that there will be a large and interesting meeting, and we desire to say that arrangements are making to cater to the enjoyment of those who may attend.

All bona fide editors and publishers of the coast are eligible to membership and a cordial invitation is given to such to be present at above date.

NEWS NOTES FROM SCIO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN.]

SCIO, May 14, 1881.

Mr. Balfour, of Balfour, Guthrie & Co., is in town looking out for lots of wheat.

The oats and wheat sacks in the Scio [illegible] warehouse are very much damaged by mice. Out of 350 sacks in one lot 130 were found destroyed.

Mr. N. Young is building a gristmill in Jordan valley, ten miles from Scio. It will contain two runs of 36 inch burrs and 24 inch chopper.

The house of Mr. A. P. Gaines, about five miles from Scio, was entered by a burglar last Thursday. A capture was made, and turned out to be a boy about 16 years old. The trial was held Friday and the prisoner sent to Albany for safe keeping.

PERSONAL.

D. Morse, Jr., of Coos bay, is in the city.

Rev. J. S. Griffin, of Hillsboro, will start east to Boston with the excursion party on Wednesday as a delegate of the State Temperance Alliance to attend the National Temperance Alliance, which meets at Saratoga, N. Y., in June. Mr. Griffin is 74 years old and has been in Oregon for 41 years. He intends to issue a pamphlet in Boston descriptive of this country. He will return in a few months.

HOW JEFFERSON DAVIS LEFT RICHMOND.

[illegible] Judge Reagan's Reminiscences before the Southern Historical Association.

President Davis and his family were in their pew that morning. I saw the [illegible] that was in the midst of the services [illegible] to the President, and the President [illegible] from the congregation. I was [illegible] well that morning. I felt that something was wrong with our cause when I saw the President withdraw, and, thus in concert [illegible] disposition [illegible] I repaired at once to my lodgings on Second street, [illegible] residence of Dr. Morris, [illegible] Franklin street. Dr. Morris [illegible] friend, Col. John D. Morris, well-known to most of us present this evening, was [illegible] general superintendent of the telegraph lines in the Confederate States. Immediately on reaching my lodgings I met a friend who asked me if I had heard the news. I responded, "No, what is it?" He replied: "Dr. Morris's little daughter was just over here, and said that her father had just come home and stated that General Lee had telegraphed President Davis that the enemy had broken the Confederate lines, that the army would have to retire farther South, and Richmond would have to be evacuated."

The hours I remained in Richmond on that melancholy Sunday, after leaving St. Paul's, were among the saddest of my life. [illegible] that our cause was [illegible] Many of the scenes witnessed by me as I went to and fro through the streets of that [illegible] city were heartrending. The bad news had spread with lightning speed all over town. Having spent much of the time during the war in Richmond, I had formed many acquaintances among its noble and hospitable citizens, and, am proud to say, some of them became my dearest friends. The men generally were [illegible] the streets, and large numbers of the ladies stood in the doors and on the steps of their houses, many bathed in tears, making inquiries and giving utterance to woeful disappointment and anguish. About nightfall I took my seat in a car of the train at the Danville depot, preparing to start southward with its sad and disappointed human freight. The President and his Cabinet were on the same train. By this time I had become much exhausted by the fatigues of preparation and visits to attached friends for the purpose of leave-taking, and had almost succumbed to the indifference resulting from the irredeemable loss and disappointed hopes. My fellow-passengers, both male and female, in the crowded car, were very much in the same plight. I never knew so little conversation indulged in by so large a number of acquaintances together, for we were nearly all acquainted with each other, and I may say fellow-fugitives, driven by the same great calamity and wrong. Very few words were interchanged. Sleep soon overcame most of us. This, I well remember, was my case, for I dropped to sleep before the train started from Richmond, and I was not aware of its departure when it left. I slept quite soundly nearly all the night through. I believe we did not leave Richmond until pretty late in the night, and when day broke in our eyes on the morning of April 3 we were somewhere in the neighborhood of Burkeville Junction, probably between that place and Roanoke. We stopped at every station on the way, crowds thronging to the train at each to make inquiries, for the bad news preserved its proverbial reputation for fast traveling. Everybody sought the President, who maintained all the way a bold front, gave no evidence by word or appearance of despair, but spoke all along encouragingly to the people.

PAUL REVERE'S FOUNDRY.

Old Business Cards—The Beginning of the Revere Copper Works—Reminiscences of a North End Mechanic.

[Boston Advertiser.]

Speaking of business cards: the card of the once famous firm of Paul Revere & Son, issued in 1804, was recently placed in our hands. It is a good specimen of conventional design and engraving, with the text:

Paul Revere and Son, at their Bell and Cannon Foundry at the North part of Boston,
Cast Bells and Brass Cannon of all sizes,
and all kinds of Composition Work, Manufacture Sheets, Bolts, Spikes,
Nails, &c., from Malleable Copper and [illegible]
Rolled [illegible]
N. B.—Cash for Old Brass & Copper.

Paul Revere was the first representative of his family who came prominently before the public; and he himself would have been astonished if he had been told how prominent a figure he would be in poetry and history. A prosperous North End mechanic, quietly but energetically pushing his business interests, he had none of that military training which many revolutionary leaders found of such eminent service; but he had an organizing brain, great judgment and courage, a determined will, unfailing energy, and remarkable executive ability. He was a born leader of the people, and his influence was pervading, especially among the mechanics and workingmen of Boston, with whom his popularity was immense. Mr. Revere was a silversmith by trade, and several Boston families have articles of his manufacture in their possession.

Previous to the revolutionary outbreak he was a busy and prosperous artisan in his specialty, but the aggression of Mother England so worked upon his impetuous nature that he quitted his workshop and threw himself with characteristic ardor into the coming struggle. Associating himself with Samuel Adams, Hancock, Warren, and other leading spirits, they organized the first systematic plans of resistance to British oppression. From their headquarters at the "Green Dragon" tavern in Union street issued the secret orders to their faithful compatriots throughout Boston and the neighboring towns, which struck the hearts of the redcoat commanders with a nameless terror.

Mr. Revere during the war resided in North square, then and for many years afterwards one of the most desirable localities in Boston. At its conclusion he again entered business pursuits with renewed energy, and added to his former occupation that of copper and brass founder. He erected a foundry in Hull street, and built for himself a house in Charter street. This stood on the ground now occupied as Phipps place, near the corner of Salem street. Some of our venerable citizens well remember the mansion house with its pleasant yard and garden. During the famous September gale of 1815, in which the spire of Christ church was blown down, his foundry building was demolished by the wind, and was not rebuilt. The same year of its destruction he purchased a lot of land in Canton, Mass., and erected the present Revere Copper Works in that town. At this foundry brass cannon and church bells were cast; many of the former were in service during the war of 1812, and the Revere bells, being about the first manufactured in this country, were in brisk demand. The bell on King's chapel, which has always been admired for its rich sonorous tones, is a recasting by Paul Revere & Son of a former imported bell. Mr. Revere also built a spacious dwelling house in Canton, residing in it during the summer months until his death in 1818. His descendants still occupy it. His son, the late Joseph Warren Revere, who was born just after the battle of Bunker Hill, was patriotically named after the lamented hero who fell in that engagement. He became associated with his father in business at the beginning of the present century, and the firm was Paul Revere & Son until the decease of the illustrious senior partner. The business is still continued there by his direct descendants.

Cardinal Newman.

Mr. Froude says of Cardinal Newman in his famous days at Oxford: "Newman's mind was world-wide. Nothing was too large for him, nothing too trivial, if it threw light upon the central question, what man really was and what was his destiny. He was careless about his personal prospects. He had no ambition to make a career or to rise to rank and power. Still less had pleasure any seductions for him. His natural temperament was bright and light, his senses, even the commonest, were exceptionally delicate. I was told that, though he rarely drank wine, he was trusted to choose the vintages for the college cellar. He could admire [illegible] greatness of action and [illegible] however remote the sphere of it [illegible] Dispatches of the Duke of Wellington [illegible] reading the book, and a friend [illegible] [illegible] conviction [illegible] right. [illegible] was that he never tried [illegible] striking things. [illegible] ill-natured. [illegible] heard from him. [illegible] was lightness itself [illegible]

Why Gloves are not Worn.

[From the Philadelphia Times.]

Heart burning is a feeble term for the state of anguish into which various strata of American endocracy finds itself plunged about the [illegible] question of gloves or no gloves. Washington, where new notions [illegible] slowly, was astonished several times during the season just past by the incursion of various traveled classes of fashion and [illegible] who made their entrance to the republican court ungloved. This was naturally an innovation that [illegible] dismay into the [illegible] ranks of [illegible] society. The contest waged violently for a time, but the ungloved [illegible] carried the day, and the glove is [illegible] abolished from polite society. The fact illustrates the whimsical basis upon which conventions rest. One day the Prince of Wales, who is very stout and very fat, and whose hands are not comfortable in gloves, [illegible] a disagreeable tendency to moisture, drove off in a hurry to hold a levee for the queen. On arriving at the drawing room he found himself gloveless. It was too late to send, and as it wouldn't have been etiquette for the rest to wear gloves when the prince had none, the ceremony was a gloveless one. Thenceforth gloves were banished from the great social ceremonials, and even in the street. The fashion has come to this country. During the last two seasons gentlemen have appeared everywhere ungloved, in the street, drawing room, the opera and the theater. In France, however, it would be considered as improper to appear in a drawing room ungloved as in [illegible] But as gloves are cheaper on the continent than in this country or England, the proprieties may be observed at less cost.

The Umpqua Canyon and the Railroad.

[From the Roseburg Plaindealer.]

From private parties we learn that Mr. Hurlburt, civil engineer and surveyor for the Oregon & California Railroad Co., who is now at work in the canyon beyond Canyonville, is not meeting with the success he has anticipated to find a practicable route through the canyon this side of Canyonville. [illegible] might be able to report. He has given up entirely the line on the west side of the creek, and has almost despaired of finding anything better on the east side. While we are very sorry that the good people of Myrtle creek, Canyonville and south cannot be accommodated with a cheap and ready means of egress and ingress, still it is and has been our opinion that when the railroad is extended beyond this place that it will go east or up Deer creek, as that is much the cheapest route to build, though a little longer, and the only question is whether the company can better afford to lose the interest on the excess of money that it will cost to build the road south, than it can afford to lose the time in running a little further on an easier road to build by going east.

Garfield will not Abdicate.

[From the New York World.]

Gen. Garfield has made an announcement to Dawes and several other senators which seems to have astonished those stalwart men, and will fill the favorite son of New York with indignation and disgust. And yet it was simply an announcement that Gen. Garfield did not intend to abdicate his office in favor of Mr. Conkling. If he had consented Gen. Garfield would have been destroyed, and the people of the United States would have been disgusted. But Senator Conkling would have been happy. Why Senator Conkling should be made happy at the expense of everybody else [illegible] except to Senator Conkling himself. It is true that at present he casts three votes in the senate of the United States, but he will be likely to cast fewer after Judge Robertson is confirmed, and even if he continues to cast three, three are not a quorum of the senate.

Proper Petitions.

The bold prayer of the Illinois senate chaplain that the Omnipotent would give the members more wisdom and greater promptitude, has been greatly admired, but this reverend gentleman doesn't stand alone as a pleader for legislators of doubtful talents. The chaplain of the Pennsylvania house comes to the front, beseeching: "O Lord! Give these lawmakers more brains! More brains! More brains!!!" And the reporters' table gave the sole "Amen!" Then there was the Maine chaplain, who was called daily while the house was in a deadlock, and who finally cried out, "O Lord! Have compassion on our bewildered representatives and senators. They have been sitting and sitting and have hatched nothing. O Lord! Let them arise from their nest and go home, and all praise shall be thine."

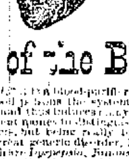
WHY SUFFER NEEDLESSLY

[illegible]



King of the Blood

Is not a "cure-all," [illegible] a true blood-purifier and tonic. Impurity of blood poisons the system, deranges the circulation, and thus induces many disorders known by different names to distinguish them according to effects, but being really branches or phases of that great generic disorder, Impurity of Blood. Such are Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Nervous Disorders, Headache, Backache, General Weakness, Heart Disease, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Piles, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Disorders, Pimples, Ulcers, Swellings, &c., &c. King of the Blood prevents and cures these by attacking the cause, Impurity of the Blood. Chemists and physicians agree in calling it "the most genuine and efficient preparation for the purpose." Sold by Druggists, $1 per bottle. See testimonials, directions, &c., in pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," wrapped around each bottle.

LIVER PILLS,

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

[illegible]

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the liver to have been extensively deranged.
